

The Dogged Atheist

An atheist comes to prove I'm wrong and that he is right with his atheism in the same zealous fashion with personal attack as the average Muslim I usually deal with on the internet, giving me a feeling that there is a lot of pride in him to believe the way he does.

Such a confrontation develops after I leave a comment on some videos that show computer animation of how things seem to work within a living cell. To me, it appears to be a miracle that can't come about through accident, to the main atheist in this book, it means I'm a moron. Like a Muslim I dialog with, he has a tendency to ignore the questions I pose and even changing the subject in an effort to divert. In this book I call him simply Chris, and, who knows, that might be his name. There are other atheists in this book, and one of them meets up with a Creationist who seems to know what he's talking about. But, this short Ramzi book, which is one of the shortest of all the books I've published, focuses mainly on Chris, as he allows me to ask him questions, that, if examined, can point to Rod Serling's Twilight Zone or, Christianity being true. Take your pick which one you feel is best represented in this book. I leave up to the grace of God.
