“Our Voices Series: What do I want to do? Mom’s Kitchen Table” addresses the empty nest syndrome but goes beyond. This book highlights many of the topics that have come about from many conversations with women who have school-age children and are asking themselves, what do I really want to do? Somehow accounting, marketing, and engineering, on their own just don’t seem to be enough. After spending years taking care of your kids and others kids, helping the environment and schools, some of this other stuff just doesn’t feel fulfilling. Women have amazing talents and at some point in their lives start to wonder what their life purpose is and this book helps to address it. Many of us at this point turn to a trusted friend (who most likely can empathize as they are addressing the same issues), seek counseling, visit psychics or gurus, and all the while feel like life is just passing us by. All that would sound daunting to anyone. Analyzing yourself and your life can be difficult, unless you choose to make an investment in yourself. This book asks you to do just that, and truly, what you get from it, is how much you want to put into it. Otherwise, you are looking for someone to tell you what to do, and you can HOPE that what that person says actually works. Give to yourself what you would give to your children. “Our Voices Series” highlights authors with out-of-the-box ideas that are different from societal norms which are not working. These are thought-provoking voices with a refreshing look at persistent problems.
