

Follow Me Into Darkness: Five Tales of Carnivale Romance

Carnivale is a time for decadence, for revelry, and for mischief. A time when we shed the figurative masks we wear in everyday life in favor of new ones—ones that allow us to be a little bolder, a little more adventurous, and perhaps a little truer to ourselves. Follow Me Into Darkness is a compilation of original tales of queer romance by five of the premier authors of contemporary romance. Hurricane by Santino Hassell Interesting things never happened to Zay. He was the wallflower everyone forgot about as soon as the booze began to flow, and Mardi Gras had never been an exception. But after a chance encounter with a devil-may-care grifter, this years celebration brings adventure and whirlwind romance. If We Be Friends by J.C. Lillis Seventeen-year-old Ven should be flying high—he’s playing the title role in a new TV drama about Hamlets teen years, and tonight they’re having a Mardi Gras cast party in a possibly-haunted castle. But Vens lost all his mirth since his boyfriend suggested they take a break, so he plans to skip the bash and brood in his trailer all night. Then the exasperating guy who plays Horatio challenges him to a Shakespearean soliloquy-off, and Ven knows his actorly honor is at stake. He says yes to the duel, trudges off to the the party to meet his fate--and finds that more awaits him onstage than a battle of wits and words. Masked by J.R. Gray Blistering heat and half-naked masked men as far as the eye can see, but Heath runs into the one face it’s taken him fifteen years to forget. Javier is plagued with a life of regret, but when a second chance confronts him, can he let go of his hang-ups and seize the moment? The Queen's Reflection by Kris Ripper Isah plays the role everyone expects: malleable and cautious, a true queen. But what others see as a queen's appropriate modesty is really just a disguise for what Isah has never told anyone, the thing no one can ever know. This body, dressed in the queen's gowns, is a lie. Once a year, at carnival, Isah dons someone else's clothes and becomes them for a night. A young cook in stained whites, or a stableboy in worn breeches. As long as no one gets too close the pretense holds. Until two strangers look past all the characters and Isah finally exposes the person behind the mask. Touched by Roan Parrish Sometimes when he touches people Philippe Rondeau sees their future. It's erratic and inconvenient, but mostly he's learned to deal with it. Sure he hasn't found true love yet, but he has friends and lovers, and is kept busy running his family's jazz club in Prohibition-era New Orleans. But now it's Mardi Gras and all bets are off. In the space of one night, Philippe falls under the spell of jazz musician Claude and learns a terrible secret about his powers. If Philippe is certain of anything it's that the future can be tricky, but the chance at love makes it all seem worthwhile.
