

Plan-it Green, EICC's Sustainable Events Programme

Sustainability is a hot topic. There's no debate on that point. However, it's one of the few things when it comes to sustainability that is not up for debate, from what we mean by sustainability to what we need to do to be sustainable. The objective of the EFQM Sustainability Good Practice Competition was to identify a number of practical examples of approaches that could be shared and would encourage and inspire others. We received a total of 24 applications from 12 countries; from Europe, the Middle East and India. The standard of the applications was very high but our jury of experts in the field of CSR narrowed them down to 5 finalists. The Edinburgh International Conference Centre (EICC)'s 'Plan-It Green' approach was recognised as 'Highly Commended' by the Jury of the EFQM Sustainability Good Practice Competition. The jury were impressed with the integration of the approach to managing sustainability as part of EICC's core business; hosting exceptional events. They were specifically impressed with the level of people involvement and the way that all the different teams were involved in ensuring sustainability issues were considered in all areas. The world-class Edinburgh International Conference Centre (EICC) has been delivering outstanding events to the global events marketplace for sixteen years. The EICC's exceptional facilities, together with the expert team of professionals, are at the heart of its success. The dynamic client services team has been entrusted with some of the world's most prestigious gatherings such as the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting, the NATO Parliamentary Assembly and the Antarctic Treaty Consultative Meeting.
