

Redeeming Cade: Heart of the City (Hometown Romance)

Cade McGuire has turned a one-eighty. The ex-con is now assistant director at the downtown mission that gave him a fresh start when he needed it most. When Cade attends a press conference and discovers that a woman running for a seat on the city council plans to close the mission, he can't just stand by. Not even for a politician as beautiful as Darby Phillips. Darby has been groomed her whole life for a future in politics. The City Council seat is just the first step in following her grandfather's footsteps and making a difference for the community. When the obviously blue-collar Cade confronts her at a press conference, demanding she come and meet the people she'll displace with her fancy new entertainment district, she knows refusing would be political suicide. No problem. A few hours at a rundown mission won't change anything. As Darby and Cade butt heads over what the city needs most, one unsettling thing becomes clear: though they're from opposite worlds, they might just be what each other needs.
