

Seeking the Rose Colored Glass

This writing is coming about on the heels of my first novelette which was compiled in a state of hypomania; it consumed my thought process and possessed me for months until completion. Something quite different is taking shape and I never imagined that this would be part of my daily existence. An average day was one chock full of chores, work and play. However, someone or something has aligned my chakras and I can no longer rest my mind or resist the keyboard. This is bringing about contentment and an awareness as it is unfolding inside of me. I would like to invite you to come along in the exploration of this territory; it is being written as revealed with no forethought or malicious intent. Finding the barn door wide open now, I am just a spirit on the run and you may form your own opinion at its conclusion. Surrender is the door one must pass through to find passion. -Deepak Chopra This is my second writing. The first book is entitled Snapshots in Black and White.
