

The Presence and Absence of God: Claremont Studies in the Philosophy of Religion, Conference 2008 (Religion in Philosophy and Theology)

Safeguarding the distinction between God and world has always been a basic interest of negative theology. But sometimes it has overemphasized divine transcendence in a way that made it difficult to account for the sense of Gods present activity and experienced actuality. Criticisms of the Western metaphysics of presence have made this even more difficult to conceive. On the other hand, there has been a widespread attempt in recent years to base all theology on (religious) experience; the Christian church celebrates Gods presence in its central sacraments of baptism and Eucharist; process thought has re-conceptualized Gods presence in panentheistic terms; and some have argued that God might be poly-present, not omnipresent. But what does it mean to say that God is present or absent? For Jews, Christians, and Moslems alike God is not an inference, an absentee entity of which we can detect only faint traces in our world. On the contrary, God is present reality, indeed the most present of all realities. However, belief in Gods presence cannot ignore the widespread experience of Gods absence. Moreover, there is little sense in speaking of Gods absence if it cannot be distinguished from Gods non-presence or non-existence. So how are we to understand the sense of divine presence and absence in religious and everyday life? This is what the essays in this volume explore in the biblical traditions, in Jewish and Christian theology and philosophy, and in contemporary philosophy of
