Mid-life Magic is a book for our times. Periods of uncertainty mean that more people are looking for ways to reorient their careers or lives. Boomers are already primed to reinvent retirement. Being proactive and re-examining where our future is headed is now necessary for most of us. Unique because it consolidates the author's 20 years professional experience with clients' planned and unplanned transitions, along with sound research, relevant graduate education and rich personal experiences. Includes the powerful questions and activities that she knows work.

Written using an encouraging, reader-centered approach the book is well-organized and referenced. It guides readers through specific steps to become clear about: who they are, what really matters to them, how to create realistic options and where they may get stuck. It provides hints to overcoming challenges and real life examples of people 40 and older, rebalancing, renewing or reinventing their lives. The 'pioneering possibilities' chapter is for those considering and creating their version of retirement.

Appropriate for the career, retirement and personal growth sections of a bookstore. For adults wondering 'what's next?' or those wanting to help someone they care about as they deal with transitions or that question, Mid-life Magic is a must!
