Excerpt from Some Account of the Parish of Saint Clement Danes: Past and Present

The compiler of this volume of Topography and History of St. Clement Danes trusts that his book will be found of interest both to the antiquarian and general reader, as giving - so far as it goes - a faithful account of one of the most remarkable parishes in the metropolis. At the present moment, when the character of the parish is being rapidly changed by the wholesale demolition of houses and streets, to make room for the erection of a Palace of Justice, it becomes the duty of the chronicler to record the ancient features of some of the houses and streets, once so intimately connected with the literary and political history of our country. He cannot presume to offer it to the public as a History of St. Clement Danes, in the usual sense of the word History, but chooses rather to submit it (as its title bears,) as Some Account of the Parish. A mere casual perusal of the various articles and notes here collected will show that St Clement Danes is no mean parish. In it have been enacted some of the most noteworthy events in the history of our country; in it many great and worthy men, as authors, actors, statesmen, or lawyers, have been born, flourished, and died.
