

Through the Eyes of an African: Impressions of the Danish Society and the Folk High Schools

Seen through the eyes of an African, the Danes and their society appear in a refreshing light. Not much is left untouched in this concise and inspiring account. It touches on the Danes and their purported coldness, their monarchy, their welfare system, their spiritual life, gender roles, cuisine, pornography and even the Danes sense of rhythm. From the early part of the account which captures the excitement and comic misunderstandings of living together with students from 37 different countries in an international folk high school, to the later part which details the struggles of an African to adapt to life in the Danish folk high schools; this book is also an exposé of folk high school life. Hilarious and provocative, insightful and educative; this is a book to be savoured.
