

Community Property: Simplified For Law School Students: e law book

A law school e book* (Normalized Reading Allowed) Community Property: Simplified For Law School Students answers the question of what happens to property, debts and businesses at the end of marriage. That is the thrust of community property law, which presumes that property acquired during marriage is community property and must be split 50/50 at dissolution or separation without intent to reconcile. It is up to the party claiming that an item of property is not community to show that it is separate property. Or that a debt incurred during marriage is a community debt to be split 50/50 at dissolution.
