

MidLife Divorce

Having had two marriages end during the "midlife years," I have a slight advantage understanding why aging has the potential to blow a marriage apart. When an event occurs to push us to thoughts of our own mortality, whether it's the death of a close friend, the death of a parent, or even disasters such as 9/11, it may cause us to rethink how we feel about our life. Is our current life satisfying? Are we getting all the enjoyment from life that we need to in order to be happy? Is there anything we're running out of time to do before we're too old to do it or to enjoy it? In many marriages, that midlife question of "is this all there is?" can lead down a path that ends in divorce.
