

Middle-Age Superbook #1 Book 8. Love Problems: Alone-Together Guide

Read this book if you want help in realizing that you were brainwashed to think getting married would make you happy. I don't want to sound crude but you can't do it to yourself when you feel like it. That's really your true nature, purge that sexual energy inside of you which is always there. Society said get married. Shut your true nature off. Compromise. Be a sucker. Pretend you're so happy. Pretend your kids are a ball of love and fun when you'd rather be doing something else. Whose the sucker? Chapter 1. Basic Love Problems 1 Biggest Love Problem The biggest love problem is that people marry, often out of loneliness or desperation, someone who does not love them at the same intensity they love their mate. People marry someone who is an obvious mismatch. They hope for the best. If they stay together, the marriage is average at best. It is better to be alone than to be in a relationship with someone you don't really love passionately. Relationships Become Routine & Boring Most people are average and boring despite whatever delusions they live under. They get married, have kids, gain fatty weight, watch TV, work boring jobs and their love life goes right along with it. If you want a great love life, you have to work at it just like you have to work at anything if you want it. Nothing is automatic. Just because you have sweet wedding pictures and nice kids, it doesn't mean anything in your feelings for each other. You have to be interested in each other and spend time doing things together. You need affection, to touch, feel, hold and be intimate. You are not going to be happy together all the time but you must commit to try and work at having fun as a couple.

Nobility/Self-Respect: Love Depends on Being True to Yourself What is a noble person. Are you each accountable to being noble within yourselves? Are you a fat consumer or do you respect yourself? This determines your love for each other. I would not love a couch potato who has more clothes than she could ever wear. Look in the mirror. Are you noble? Are you hot stuff? Are you a good specimen of humanity? I dont like selfish, overweight pigs, especially if they got a big mouth as though theyre trying to imitate some sit-com character. I see a lot of people like this.

Dark Moments in the Relationship You dont talk to me. You dont want to touch me. I cant live like this. Miss Bewildered Dark moments must be resolved. If they arent, they build up. The animosity comes out in other ways. One person feels neglected. The other says he or she doesnt listen. Every couple argues. When you argue, its the way you treat each other that matters. Loving people argue without malice, without venom. People on the verge of break-up have a contemptuous, hateful tone to their communication.

Endearing Qualities Flip to Contempt Many qualities that a lover initially likes turn to contempt as they get to know each other and realize they are more different than they originally thought. This is normal. As people realize they are different, they often look for excuses to not like their lover. Here are a few qualities that can easily flip: funny becomes stupid and immature spontaneous becomes scatterbrained, unstable confidence becomes arrogance smart becomes a superiority complex easygoing becomes lazy caring becomes dependent ambitious becomes selfish When you start to see cracks in the relationships, its very easy to start to hate everything the person does. This is contempt. When it hits this stage, the relationship is over. Love Can go to Hate Real Fast Once love fails to hold us in its spell and the scales fall from the eyes, the feelings of sex and love can very quickly be replaced with anger, hatred and even violence. If youre not attentive to your relationship, watch out.
