

The Mexican Suitcase

Charlie Baker, a freshman at San Diego State University, is persuaded to take a suitcase from Tijuana, Mexico to Boston, Massachusetts by automobile. The vehicle has a flat tire outside of Albuquerque, New Mexico. The suitcase, which has a belt around it with the word, MEXICO, engraved in it is removed from the trunk and placed on the pavement. A state police officer stops to assist Charlie and sees the suitcase, which is opened without Charlie's permission. The contents of the suitcase cause Charlie to be arrested and incarcerated in the county detention center. He is confronted with the danger of personal violence. Charlie finds out that alcohol and drug abuse is a serious problem among inmates in the correction system. While incarcerated Charlie is comforted by reading the Bible and is faced with life altering changes. He meets a young minister who befriends him and discusses the need for baptism with him. Charlie considers several passages in the Bible dealing with baptism. He has to appear at a forfeiture hearing for the vehicle and makes several appearances in court. A young public defender provides valuable legal assistance. Find out what happens to Charlie by reading the book.
