

The Return of Hijāb Part III: The Status of the Muslim Woman within the Islamic System

Within a century and a half, the Muslims flourished and controlled the earth with their power, strength, wisdom and knowledge. They tamed nations, overpowered kingdoms and established their standard in the heart of Asia, in the North of Africa and parts of Europe. They left behind their religion, legislation, language, knowledge and ethics embraced by the hearts of people and practised by different races, after they had been, in the past, a group of scattered tribes without a unified system, knowledge nor legislation. Muslims ascendancy spanned the period of the dark ages, and history stood dumbfounded to its awe and magnificence, without the Muslims having to establish an institute or build a university. Instead, tents, houses and palaces were their institutes and schools. They were plantations for wisdom and ethics under the responsibility of truthful mothers, whom Allah ﷻ has assigned with the task to raise those who safeguard the properties and the creations of Allah ﷻ and protect His Rights.

Indeed, those women were the best in their duties and the most prepared for their responsibilities.
