

The Christmas Scarf: A Holiday Novella (Book 3.5) (Comfort Crossing)

Sometimes, Christmas wishes bring their own special magic. A woman chasing a life-long dream. A man given a second chance at love. If one wins, the other loses. Does a stranger's scarf hold enough magic to make both their Christmas wishes come true? Missy Sherwood has always wished for one thing, to be a country singer. After trying to make it for years in Nashville, she returns to her hometown of Comfort Crossing, Mississippi, feeling like a misfit and a failure. But there's no use in telling anyone the truth just yet—she's here for longer than the holidays, she's home for good. Right? Dylan Rivers is glad to see his old friend return to town, not only to help him with the children's Christmas pageant, but because her homecoming sparks long-forgotten but never acted upon feelings. But there is no use in acting on those feelings, she's soon to head back to her fabulous career in Nashville. Right? Then a stranger comes to town and has Missy re-examining her dreams. She gets one final chance, and her life-long wish is within her grasp. Is there really magic in the stranger's scarf, or is it in the power of knowing her heart's true wish?
